At the UU College of Social Justice, all of our programs are built around immersion learning. Why is this so important?

Immersion learning is what happens to us when we step outside of our comfort zones and allow the world to speak to us. It’s in the sudden awakening we feel when we cross boundaries of language or culture, race or country, with open minds and hearts. It’s when people whose lives are different from ours invite us into their homes, and we leave with the recognition that we are family.

Immerson learning brings us face to face with a part of the world’s reality we hadn’t known before. It makes us realize at a bone-deep level that we are not separate from others, no matter how far away they may live, and that their struggle for justice must be our own struggle as well. This is the kind of learning that sometimes quite literally changes our lives.

Join us on a CSJ program this year!

Regards,
Rev. Kathleen McTigue and the UUCSJ Team

Follow us! @uucsj
info@uucsj.org